BAZAAR INFORMATION

Each family will be receiving a ticket packet, for the Raffle/Meal tickets for the Bazaar. If you have not received your packet, please contact Virginia at 979-836-0080, or call the parish office. If you need additional tickets please come by the parish office, or make arrangements to pick them up after Masses. Ticket sales represent the largest share of income from the Bazaar, so please be supportive of this, our annual parish fundraiser!

Due to premature deterioration of the exterior trim on the stained glass windows, the damaged portions of the trim are in the process of being replaced this week by the original contractor, under the terms of the warranty.

We also plan to have some pruning of trees, and some overall maintenance of the grounds, done in the near future.

Congratulations to our pastor Fr. Jozef, who celebrated 49 years of priesthood on June 17.

The Peter's Pence collection, previously scheduled for this weekend, has been postponed until the weekend of July 3-4. Please try to remember to hold your envelopes until then. Thank you.

Thoughts for Your Meditation

Jesus commended the hemorrhaging woman with: Your faith has restored you to health. He challenged the synagogue official, distraught over the news of his daughter's death: Do not be afraid; only have faith. Perhaps Mark connected the two incidents because he saw both characters symbolizing the extremes of the community: those at the bottom and those at the top of the social and religious system. Their respective healings symbolized the wholeness that Jesus wished to bring to every level of Jewish society. Only have faith. Jesus wasn't referring to the accuracy of what they believed about him but to their capacity and readiness to trust him, to entrust themselves to him.

Church leaders today talk about the crisis of faith in Western culture. Depending on how they envisage faith, some see the solution to this crisis in what they have come to call "The New Evangelisation". Go out and teach the basics – be clear, be forceful. Undoubtedly, there is a place for that. But who will listen? Indeed, who will go further and respond with commitment? We can all be challenged on that score – those outside the Church, but also those of us within it. As I read the Gospel, I see Jesus challenging to commitment – challenging people to trust him, and his way of love and of universal outreach.

Might the religious crisis confronting the modern Western world be reduced to a question of people's ability and readiness to trust and to commit themselves? ... to commit themselves not only to a religious lifestyle, but virtually to anything, certainly, to anything transcendent? Have we in our Western world lost our nerve? Have we opted for security and familiarity, for abundance, and limitless information and distraction instead? Lacking trust to move beyond what we think we can control, we confine our attention to our kitchens and our home improvements?

Perhaps we have reason no longer to trust many of our institutions: the press, the banking industry, the parliamentary process, Trade Unions, the police, and, not least, the Church. Perhaps for some, their betrayed trust in certain individual persons has left them badly bruised.

We need somehow to find balance between naively giving trust and fearfully withholding trust. If we won't trust, we won't commit. If we won't commit, we can never mature and become whole. I find Jesus' comment to the synagogue official quite relevant: Do not be afraid; only have faith. We fear surrender in faith and trust. It takes courage. It also takes wisdom to sense whom we can trust. Both – courage and wisdom - are hard to cultivate. But if we don't cultivate them, we shall never become whole ... never, really, surrender - even to God.

Perhaps, we can be helped, and also help others, to become increasingly trusting and trustworthy. I remember, early on in my priesthood, celebrating the sacrament of reconciliation with a young girl in grade five or six. I can still see her today calmly looking me straight in the eye with total trust. Her trust had a profound effect on me. It became an inescapable incentive to become ever more trustworthy.

We need each other. We all need others to trust us if we are to grow trustworthy. Others need us to trust them if they are to become trustworthy. We all need wisdom and discernment. We all need courage. We shall make mistakes. Our trust will sometimes be betrayed. But if we are trusted enough by enough others, we can live with betrayal and move beyond.

Fr. John McKinnon

THIS WEEK'S MESSAGE

“Since it belongs to the supernatural order, grace escapes our experience and cannot be known except by faith. We cannot therefore rely on our feelings or our works to conclude that we are justified and saved. However, according to the Lord’s words ‘Thus you will know them by their fruits’—reflection on God’s blessings in our life and in the lives of the saints offers us a guarantee that grace is at work in us and spurs us on to an ever greater faith and an attitude of trustful poverty.

“A pleasing illustration of this attitude is found in the reply of St. Joan of Arc to a question posed as a trap by her ecclesiastical judges: ‘Asked if she knew that she was in God’s grace, she replied: “If I am not, may it please God to put me in it; if I am, may it please God to keep me there.”’”
